

Announcement: Annual Conference 2022

At Basic Income and Development, this year's FRIBIS' annual conference (10-12 October 2022), we will be taking a closer look at the relationship between basic income and development ideas and the potential they hold for the challenges of both the present and the future.

We welcome contributions from scholars and activists of all genders, cultures and places. In addition to the traditional Call for Papers, there will also be a Call for Workshops and a Call for Student Participation (see below for more information).

FRIBIS is particularly – but by no means exclusively – looking forward to contributions that deal with the following topics:

- Ecologically sustainable development: What role can a UBI play in improving people's economic living conditions while protecting the environment?
- Development cooperation and social justice: Could the function of a basic income be to render development cooperation more efficient, increasing equal opportunities and promoting redistribution from top to bottom?
- Basic income in (post-)conflict regions: What impact could the introduction of a UBI have in regions branded by resource conflicts and power struggles? Can a UBI support societies in their development towards more resilience and social peace?
- Proposals beyond the conference's focus on development are also welcome.

Call for Papers

We welcome proposals that reconstruct, further develop and reflect critically on the relationship between development concepts and basic income. The conference papers will be published in print as part of an anthology after being reviewed by the editors.

Call for Workshops

The FRIBIS Workshops are open for activities of all kinds: artistic performances, open discussion sessions, workshops with group activities and much more. The focus will be on experimentation with new ideas and approaches. Our aim is not to make a show of finished results but to develop new ideas – also in direct exchange with the conference participants.

Call for Student Participation

As part of FRIBIS' promotion of young researchers, students (4th semester and above) are also invited to present their ideas. The best presentation at the conference will receive the FRIBIS Student Award, which comes with a prize of €500.
